MEXICO READY FOR ANOTHER START IN LIFE

No More Revolutions for the Average Mexican—Exiles Begin to Return to Home Country.

LAND OF OPPORTUNITY

Living Costs Practically Same as in America—Rich Oil Wells—Servants at Small Pay.

By RALPH H. TURNER

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—People become keenly philosophical in a country where revolutions have been featured throughout that country's history.

Every-day philosophy in Mexico, therefore—a philosophy which frequently is expressed by no more than a shrug of the shoulders—has been developed to the highest point. And yet even the Mexican, despite his feeling of indifference and his sense of the futility of everything, is preparing today to begin life over again. He is going ahead in anticipation of a "new deal," believing that he and his children have greater cause for hope than at any time in the last ten years.

That spirit, with its varied manifestations, is the index to the social condition of Mexico today. It represents the thought of Mr. Average Man.

The whole population, with the exception of a few disgruntled politicians and military men, is sick of revolution; the country has been looted from one end to the other.

And so the Mexican makes ready for another start. People who flooded into Mexico City from the provinces, because the capital offered a greater degree of shelter from marauding rebels, are beginning now to retrace their steps. They are going back to the farm or the store. Exiles who were expelled by one or the other of the various regimes since the fall of Porfirio Diaz in 1910 are streaming home from New York and London, Paris and Madrid.

But the present is still the period of transition. Not until the new government finds its stride and turns its attention to a score of pressing domestic and international problems, at the same time obtaining financial and moral aid from abroad, will Mexican national life approach a state of well-being. In the meantime, the Mexican offers further proof—if such were needed—that human nature remains the same, no matter how many international boundary lines are crossed. The Mexican goes to the movies (American movies), grumbles about the high cost of living, and loves his children.

MANY AMUSEMENTS

In Mexico City, a thoroughly modern capital, he attends the theater, stages an exuberant "party" with about the same regularity as an American did in the pre-amendment days, and goes to the bull fight on Sunday afternoon. He is a devout Catholic, but has never heard of a "blue law." He probably spends his money more lavishly than an Anglo-Saxon person with a similar income. The cost of living, for a Mexican with a comfortable income, needs vary much from what it costs in the United States. One thing just about balances another. He must pay more for a great many articles, because they are imported, but he can maintain a whole corps of servants for the same expenditure that one would involve from the Rio Grande north.

Vegetables, fruit and some of the meats (the goat, especially the kid, is popular), cost less than in an American metropolis. Fuel is a minor item in Mexico City, because of the temperate climate. If the Mexican lives at a hotel, he may pay anywhere from $2 to $6 (United States currency) a day for his room, though he won't receive the modern accommodations that most Americans demand. House rents are high, as practically no building has been done during the revolutionary days. It is beginning now to revive.

One difficulty with life in Mexico City—the one that most Americans encounter—is the social condition that has overlooked any provision for the middle class. The "high class" Mexican generally limits his business activity to either owning property, and deriving the income therefrom, or playing some part in the management of the government. Both have been paying propositions in the past. The merchandising business and the operation of mines, oil properties and other resources is generally in the hands of foreigners. The poorer classes get along the best they can. Frequently their condition seems pitiful to an American. It is common for three or four people to live, sleep and eat in one room. The room doesn't have to be a large one, either. Beans and corn are the chief articles of diet. The cotton garments, a sombrero and a pair of sandals are the principal forms of raiment worn by the people of the poorest class. How a Mexican clerk can live on one hundred pesos ($50) a month, and present a good appearance, may seem beyond comprehension, but it is done. Almost the best in Mexican servants may be obtained for twenty or twenty-five pesos monthly.

ENJOY SLEEP

As a result of the social structure, an American may have difficulty to avoid the alternatives of living either as an oil magnate or a day laborer. For instance, there are no "quick lunch" restaurants in Mexico City. Dinner, in the middle of the day, is an event which requires the fullest attention. Business houses close from 1 to 3, sometimes longer. The time is devoted largely to eating, and then sleeping. After a full Mexican meal the siesta is almost indispensable and comes easily, as sleep comes to one who is drugged.

But there's another alibi for sleep besides the length of a Mexican menu. Mexico City is about 7,500 feet above sea level and the altitude has strange and varied effects. One requires more sleep the doctors explain, because many organs of the body are forced to work overtime. Also, eggs must be boiled longer, if one takes them that way. "Fried, straight up," is not affected by the altitude. Consumption, of alcoholic drinks is held to be extremely dangerous, because of the altitude's manipulations with the heart, although statistics show no loss in consumption for that reason.

The Mexican sense of humor is highly developed. There is the story, for instance, that involves Carranza, when the famous terror visited Mexico City and sang in the bull ring. It was the largest place available and was thronged at every performance, the Mexicans of every social class having a keen appreciation of music. Carranza had finished "Carmen." The tremendous applause was followed by a hush when a pony, a bull fight fan as well as a music lover, arose in his seat and demanded loudly: "Otro toro." (another bull)

EXPERT SAYS BRITISH GOLFERS NOT AFRAID

By HENRY L. FARRELL

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

New York, Dec. 24.—All England is not so pessimistic about the proposed American golf invasion next summer.

When the British golfers first heard that funds were being raised here to send twenty American links experts to England next summer, after the British amateur and the open championships, many declared that it was all over. America, by such a drive, surely would succeed.

However, "Fairway," a British expert, writing in "Sporting Life," does not see such cause for alarm.

"If our leading amateurs keep up on their game throughout the winter months," he writes, "the fears of those pessimistic prophets who would have us bow to the inevitable as a result of American preparation for invasion may be dispersed when the time arrives for the international duel."

"Fortunately we are, or should be, quite immune from defeat with the talent we already possess. I do not care how well Robert Jones, Charles Evans, or Francis Ouimet play, if they come here in the anticipation of success in the open championships, they are more optimistic than usual—even for Americans. We have the veterans headed by Vardon, Taylor, Braid and Herd; we have the intermediate stage of players, of whom Mitchell, Duncan and Ray are the most prominent, and we have the younger generation, such as Allis, Ockenden and Holland, a combination which should produce the individual who will defeat the strongest forces produced by America or any other nation."

"When it has been necessary, England invariably has found 'the man' and I am convinced we shall do so in the season of 1921."

Former Service Men Will Get Extra Bonus in Eleven States

By United Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Soldiers, sailors and marines—and in some cases nurses, and first aid workers—who took part in the World War will be rewarded in at least eleven states of the Union.

That number of states have already authorized the expenditure of approximately $150,000,000 for relief of veterans. Bonus bills have been proposed in a score or more other state legislatures, but have not yet been enacted.

The states that have so far extended financial relief are New York, New Jersey, Minnesota, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Washington, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

New York's appropriation naturally leads the list in point of size, on account of the fact that that state, with approximately 10 per cent of the nation's population, had the largest enrollment. The amount the Albany legislature voted for soldier bonuses was $45,000,000. This sum was approved by the voters in a referendum at the November election.

Other amounts, where definitely set, follow: New Jersey, $12,000,000; Minnesota, $20,000,000; Wisconsin, $25,000,000; Washington, $11,000,000; North Dakota, $600,000 (first year).

In Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island the bonus decided on was $100 for each recipient, the amount to be raised by taxation.

In Alabama the legislature cancelled the veterans' poll taxes for five years. Efforts were made in Illinois and Maryland last year to pass a bonus bill, but they failed. A provision for soldiers wid was defeated by the Missouri electorate at the last election.

In New York soldiers, sailors, marines
